

A MESSAGE FROM PREMIER JOHN HORGAN

Dear Team BC members,

On behalf of the Government of British Columbia, I would like to offer my congratulations on being selected to Team BC for the 2022 Skills Canada National Competition (SCNC).

SCNC 2022 will serve as an exciting opportunity to display your skills and proficiency. I know you have worked hard to prepare, and this must be a proud moment for you and your family. The experience and confidence gained through this competition will help foster the tools and knowledge you will need to create a brighter future, and it is wonderful to see young people who are so passionate about skilled trades and technology.

With more than 85,000 job openings expected in the skilled trades and another 111,000 jobs anticipated in the technology sector over the next decade, our government is working hard to make sure more people can access the education and training they need to succeed. As our province looks to build the workforce of tomorrow, we will need talented individuals like you to build a better BC for future generations. I have no doubt that your participation in this event will serve as an inspiration to your peers and reinforce the importance of skilled trades and technology programming for BC's youth.

I am thrilled that British Columbia has the chance to host this year's National Competition, and I wish you all the best as you showcase your talents in Vancouver!
